Problem with electrical or I am missing something. I believe whoever made it for Bayliner, did it in big quantities. Or custom only Thanks Clymer, SELOC and Mercruiser publish manuals. The switch is probably a kill switch. Attach a lanyard to it and you so if you fall the engine quits. Most remotes have a trim up switch and a trailer switch. Mine is one switch stops at up, must be activated again to get the drive all the way up. Usually an electrical problem if only one works. Search this forum for canvas; something like
